My Commitment to Distilled Water

"My personal pursuit of pure water began 46 years ago when I discovered bacteria and parasites in our spring water while living on a farm in Virginia. Concern for the health of my family led me to steam distillation, widely recognized as the 'gold standard' in water purification. What began as a concern has become a life-long conviction."

"For four decades, I've been committed to helping people improve the quality of their drinking water and have continually worked to keep up with the latest research and information. I diligently investigate the different treatment methods and equipment, and have a junk pile of gadgets, devices, magic waters and liquid potions to prove it. I've read thousands of water articles and reports from trade publications, magazines, newsletters and the internet, and my enormous library of reference material includes over 2,000 books and DVDs on water and health."

"Even though there is widespread disagreement, my own research has led me to unapologetically believe that the healthiest drinking water is distilled. And my own story confirms no harmful effects from drinking distilled water for over 46 years. To the contrary, I enjoy a healthy and active lifestyle at the young age of 74 and have no mineral deficiencies or other infirmities.”

“As a result of my research and personal experience, I am more convinced than ever that nothing compares in performance and simplicity to distillation. While no single technology will meet everyone’s criteria, a quality home distillation system is the proven, time-tested method that will provide the safest and healthiest drinking water possible.”
